10	About & Outcome	On International Women's Day, celebrating mountaineer Anshu Jamsenpa is an acknowledgment of resilience, determination, and breaking barriers. Her groundbreaking feat of being the first woman to scale Mount Everest twice within five days in a single season is a testament to her extraordinary courage and skill, serve as a beacon of inspiration for women everywhere. She is the first Indian women to ascent Mt. Everest five times. She is from Bomdila, West Kameng District, Arunachal Pradesh, India. She is the winner of Tenzing Norgay National Adventure Award in 2017 and also awarded by Padma Shri in 2021. Beyond the physical challenges of scaling the world's highest peak, her journey embodies the spirit of defying societal expectations and pushing the boundaries of what is deemed possible for women. Her story underscores the importance of perseverance, belief in oneself, and the relentless pursuit of one's dreams, regardless of gender. By celebrating Anshu Jamsenpa on International Women's Day, we honor not only her individual achievements but also the collective strength and resilience of women worldwide. She exemplifies the limitless potential and power of women to conquer seemingly insurmountable obstacles and leave an indelible mark on history. Anshu Jamsenpa's legacy serves as a reminder that gender is not a limitation but a source of strength, and her story continues to inspire generations of women to reach for the highest peaks, both metaphorically and literally. International Women's Day celebrations often highlight the achievements and
